Ask your Pharmacist

Q There is a medicine for my brother's fever. I'm having a fever, is it okay to take it.

A You shouldn't! The dosage depends on your weight and age. It's dangerous to take on your own just because the symptoms are the same. Be sure to consult a doctor or a pharmacist.

Even if you have a fever, if you're fine, there is no need to force it down with medicine. It's much easier to hydrate and cooling your body. Only when the fever is bad, you can take it. (If there is no concern about convulsion, etc.)
